DUST TO DUST

Award-winning tour operators and towing trainers, Global Gypsies, tell us they are receiving dozens of inquiries from grey nomads for a pretty unusual service. It's called "Dust to Dust" and it enables nature-lovers to have their ashes scattered in the Australian outback or in a remote desert area.

A sensitive and personalised private ceremony is conducted by one of Australia's most respected outback guides, Jeremy Perks, who is a Global Gypsies' Director and a former Tour Guide of the Year. He ensures that each service is personalised and performed with dignity and respect. The ceremony can be extremely simple, or it can include special wording or music and can be photographed or videoed if desired.

Global Gypsies have been running award-winning tours into the outback for over 17 years. During that time, they have performed several ash-scattering services in tranquil and picturesque locations. They say demand has increased significantly over the past few years and that many clients are now requesting the service in their wills.

Global Gypsies Director, Jan Barrie, says "Our Dust to Dust service is a dignified, caring way to provide peace of mind to people who genuinely love nature and the Australian bush. It has particular appeal to those who have fond memories of time spent in the desert or who always wanted to explore the outback but never had the opportunity to do so. It's a loving and comforting way for people to take their final journey into this ancient, timeless land."

Jan says it can be extremely difficult, particularly for people who live in the city, to arrange to have their ashes scattered in the outback and to organise a fitting farewell. "We visit some of the most beautiful and remote places in Australia on a regular basis. It is an honour and a privilege when people who love the bush as much as we do ask us to fulfill their last wish in these inspiring destinations," she says.
